Safety Above All Else

DAVE HENDERSON || DIRECTOR OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

“Safety” is a universal word that is mentioned often and used loosely. Communities large and small, as well as companies across all industries, are committed to safety. Sports leagues, at every level, take safety seriously. Unfortunately, when it really counts, steps to keep the public, workers, athletes and loved ones safe are often ignored in the interest of expediency or convenience.

However, safety is a serious issue, especially when it comes to electrical safety. For Morgan County Rural Electric Association, it’s the number one priority. This is not empty talk. Over time, Morgan County REA has created a culture of safety by putting our employees’ safety and that of the community above all else. At its essence, MCREA’s mission is to provide safe and reliable electricity to its member-owners. Equally as important, we want to return our workers home safely to their loved ones. To do this requires ongoing focus, dedication and vigilance.

According to the Electrical Safety Foundation, each year thousands of people in the United States are critically injured and electrocuted as a result of electrical fires, accidents and electrocution in their own homes. Many of these accidents are preventable.

There is much you can do to keep yourself and your community safe around electricity.

Don’t attempt electrical DIY projects or overload your outlets. Report downed power lines, and don’t allow children to play around substations or padmount transformers. More electrical safety tips and information can be found online on our website (mcrea.org) or on the Safe Electricity website at safeelectricity.org.

If you want us to provide a safety demonstration at your school or community event, please contact MCREA Member Services by calling 970-867-5688 or emailing memberservices@mcrea.org.

Be mindful when it comes to electrical safety. Pause and take the extra time to plug into safety. Have an enjoyable and safe summer.

FOLLOWING LEADING NATIONAL SAFETY STANDARDS

Working with electricity is an inherently dangerous job, especially for lineworkers. Morgan County REA’s ongoing focus is keeping employees and the communities we serve safe around electricity. We established and follow safety protocols based on leading national safety practices for the utility industry. We require our lineworkers to wear specialized equipment when working next to or with power lines. There are specific protocols that our lineworkers follow when dealing with electricity. We have regular meetings where our employees discuss upcoming projects from a safety perspective. They share “lessons learned” and actively work to improve in the future.

We also encourage our employees to speak up and hold each other accountable for safety. By cultivating a culture of openness and transparency, we promote problem-solving with regard to safety, rather than defaulting to a blame game. As appropriate, we brief contractors on our safety protocols and set expectations for their engagement.

KEEPING THE COMMUNITY SAFE

Because we live and work in and around the communities we serve, we care about our neighbors. Morgan County REA conducts electrical safety demonstrations in schools and for community events. We also have an electric safety presentation

MCREA Member Services Representative Bill Annan conducts safety presentations at local schools as part of the cooperative’s safety program.

Retired MCREA Employee Glenda Powell served as the engineering and operations secretary throughout her career.

Many of Glenda Powell's family are on hand for a retirement reception held in her honor.

GLEND POWELL RETIRES FROM MCREA

GEOFF BAUMGARTNER || COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALIST

Engineering and operations secretary Glenda Powell began her journey with Morgan County REA in November 1999. That excursion came to a conclusion earlier this year when Powell retired from the electric cooperative after 19 years at her post.

“It’s the relationships you develop with people that I felt was an important part of working at Morgan County REA,” Powell said. “It’s the camaraderie — especially with the office personnel at Morgan County REA. When you work so closely with people day in and day out, you develop relationships and friendships. The fellowship I had with the other employees are times I will always remember.”

Ironically, Powell said that her job functions at MCREA were almost identical to her previous employment for a telecommunications company in Muleshoe, Texas. “It was kind of amazing that I got to do pretty much the same job, and I really liked seeing a job completed — seeing it through to the end,” she recalled. Powell and her family relocated to this area when her husband, Rick, was transferred from his job in Texas to work at Xcel Energy in Fort Morgan. [Joe J. Marx, acct #xxx5000]

Powell particularly enjoyed helping with the outside activities the cooperative participated in throughout her tenure. The events she mentioned included the annual meeting, Dutch oven cook-off, Brush Rodeo and the MCREA golf tournament.

When asked what her plans are in retirement, she said with a smile that she plans to continue to help out with the elderly, performing such tasks as taking them meals and running errands. She also said that she plans on doing some traveling, playing golf, bowling and spending time with friends and family. Powell’s son Ryan lives in Denver, and daughter Leslie lives in Thornton with husband Jim and their three children.

Everyone at Morgan County REA thanks Glenda for her many years of service and wishes her the best in her retirement.

Save Your Energy for Vacation

It’s that time of year to pack up the car and head out on summer vacation. It takes a ton of energy to get everyone ready for your yearly excursion, so why not save some energy in your home while you are away. There are some big and small changes you can make to have lower bills greet you upon your return home.

One of the biggest energy savers is changing the temperature of your home. “Turning up your thermostat to 85 degrees could lower your bill by 35 percent a week,” says energy expert Sam Adair. If no one will be in your home, another option could be to turn your unit off completely until you return.

Another big cost saver is turning off the breaker to your water heater. If you won’t be home, your water heater does not need to be running. “A water heater can cost about a dollar a day, so you could save a couple bucks just by switching the breaker while you are on vacation,” Adair adds.

A couple of smaller things you can do to lower your bill include shutting your blinds and curtains to keep the sun from heating up your home; turning off all power strips; and unplugging small appliances.

Adair recommends buying a timer if you want to leave some lights on while you are away. The timer will ensure that the lights will be on for a short amount of time during the day versus using energy all day long.

Whether you are going away for just a few days or an extended amount of time, these tips can help put money back in your pocket this summer.
